Not to mention Utilities/LogViewer.

They are both equally bad IMHO, LogViewer can only display specific logs and has no search function, logfile.datatype can show any log in the standard OS log format and does now have a search function, neither allow copying pasting. Logviewer is a bit prettier with colour coded lines for different types of event, which is nice.

It's a shame that you can't choose which datatype to show a file in when they might match mmore than one type.
