I agree with the previous speakers! This is a promising project.

Is the file format is decided yet? Please note that PageStream's IFF file format documentation is already released to the public.

It is a very comprehensive format with great compatibility. The older versions simply skip the new features when loading a document, that is the way what should follow all large applications.

To use this format for Cinnamon Writer would allow easy exchange of documents for the DTP application which is running (will run) on several platforms.

Bye!
