I'm not the developer of OWB but don't you think this is really insulting? It is one thing to offer constructive criticism. But this is just outright insulting especially given the fact joerg has repeatably informed everyone that OWB is and was never meant to be a full featured browser. And no, it is not an excuse given some other guy added some of those features to another branch of OWB either. Being insulting is being insulting. Expectations for OWB were never set high by joerg so I don't see the need to continually insult his efforts like this.

That said, it would be really nice to have a login account management feature added. I suppose I should grab the source and start hacking but I really haven't the time. Hopefully Timberwolf will be up to snuff soon and my soap box won't matter any more.
