Ideally IB should be CSS capable by now but sadly it isn't. It is however functional, and no way obsolete. I often use it purely because sites load a lot quicker (important if BT restricts your access to 512kbps) than OWB or other CSS enabled browsers.

Even though I was thrilled by the speed increase when I recently switched from dialup to a fast cable connection, I still get impatient with long pages full of useless jpeg images. Sometimes operating IB with image loading disabled (and sometimes even javascript disabled) can get to the information I want much faster than with newer browsers.
