There are some issues left that mostly affect popup windows. During the "normal" operation, there is no rendering errors. You can get the preferences window, there are no more black boxes in the window, and no flickering during scrolling.

Yeah, that what i mean when ask :)

Btw, just for learning purposes: those bugs was because of cairo, or just because of code-porting of firefox ?

All in all, I think people will find this to be a big improvement over the last version.

Btw, current public version use HW-accelerated cairo and compositing or not ? I mean did i understand right, that current public beta are use HW-accelerated cairo, but the new one, will not use it , and because of it will be a bit slower in rendering ?
