explained that wrapping an Reaction GUI around a libpoppler port isn't impossible.

Why it should be impossible all in all ? I mean, core is matter, what kind of GUI are done its only up to programmer who working with the core. Just in case with MUI we already have gui builded upon, and all the work already done by morphos author and we need only port it. But in case with Reaction we need to spend a lot more time for making the same what he do, but in reaction. Time, resources and usuall stuff.
