Well, the whole idea of using something like AmiUpdate, is that users discover the updates for themselves, and this helps reduce the strain on the server. Announcing the updates will cause a surge in the downloads again.

One 100K (or whatever) file isn't quite the same as a 700MB ISO though, is it?

If you don't have AmiUpdate set to automatic then this thread might warn that there are updates that might otherwise be missed for weeks. If everybody has it set to automatic... there's still going to be loads of users downloading updates at the same time isn't there?
