@Rigo: For me the Point is, that there is on no place a public list of the Information what the update does.

Or when there is an update available.

It would be nice, if there will be a list on a public Webpage with the informations about the updates (we now just get before an update and if we hit the Information button after select the entry in amiupdate).

Hyperion should be publishing when there is an update available, and what it does.

It's also useful to get some discussion on some of the updates if they break things (eg. the Intuition update) or add new features.
