One thing I dislike in AmiUpdate and that is the first position in the Workbench menu. For several years that menu was untouched. Amiupdate is not a tool that is normally should be used daily. I think it would be a better place for it somewhere around Workbench/About.

Agreed. I went for Backdrop a few days ago and blindly selected the first item as I'm so used to it being in that position (I haven't used Backdrop for years - but I used to use it all the time), and was quite surprised when AmiUpdate started.

That's a "getting used to it" thing, but I don't think Execute Command (which is incredibly useful) should be further down the menu than Update, as that's something which I'm sure is very frequently used.
