I know, it's easy-peasy to "fix" it locally.

But i don't think it's a "feature" to have the same program opened from different environments behave differently, that's just too confusing.

If there was was a shell "Prefs" that took care of the list of programs that behave differently and shows that accordingly it would be another matter.

(Maybe even with the possibility to change those settings from the Prefs)

But doing that in the "hidden" way it is done now is confusing...thus me reporting it as bug... 😊
