I actually had several weird behaviours over the years of the screenmode prefs that I haven't always reported. Once a program changed the screenmode and other prefs and afterwards I had to manually restore the default setting of the viewable part of the screenmode over and over until it became permanent. I have certain 50hz resolutions not "sticking" while others do (60hz always stay). My current screenmode prefs opens in a new screen even if I tell it not to. I had issues with it relating to the screens prefs.
