So at least we can do now some basic debugging when needed.

Yeah, probably i can try now to think how to catch bug in FrickingShark without needs of debug version of ogles2.library.

Btw, i also notice, that with current (interface patching) way, the patches installed when you run programm, but removes only when you send ctrl+c to the glsnoop itself, not when app is exit. Maybe that need to be caught too (so, to have clear installing/removing of patches when need it).
