If you add UPDATE all previous notifications are closed, it does not update the existing one. It might look like that as you only have 1 open at a time.

If you add PERCENTAGE by itself then the first time a new notification is created, after that the existing notification with the progress bar is updated (I think the text changing in this case is bug).

Where there is concept class is if you add both UPDATE and PERCENTAGE, update only removes the notifications without percentage bar, you're not seeing that as again you only have one open at a time, I think it should also close the percentage notification and open a new percentage notification as it would with a normal notification. This would solve the image update and text layout issues and not mess up the layouts for other apps notifications.

I'll write a script to demo this better later, and see if I can track the offending code down later still 😊
