Thank you for your fine words. For me, there is no need of a desktop GUI, but I plan to create a website that will work fine on IBrowse and AWeb, with minimum usage of Javascript, no logins, but with some capabilities like the original websites have. So, this can be a fast and great GUI for all systems, without having to lose time to different environments. Of course this "GUI" will be only online, without having to install anything. Like tonvid.com used by SMTube, only that you will need only your beloved browser.

What do you think about it?
