The initial idea was to play piano thats why standard keys, etc... but then I thought maybe connect it to my SAM and have both worlds?

Of course you can have the best of both worlds! Myself, I can't play so the KeyStep (with its 32 mini-keys) is ideal for my setup.

When reading up on keyboard specs, double-check that it does not mention a driver anywhere. Also, make sure that the vendor that sells you the keyboard provides hassle-free service as regards returns. I had a problem with the AKAI Max25 control keyboard, which is advertised as class-compliant but the OS4 CAMD MIDI driver does not see the ports when connected over USB. So the thing had to go.
