I apologize, for this request, surely you are working on much more important things.

And so mine is just a "superfluous" request

Not having real PPC hardware, I cannot participate in important reports for real hardware.

I was told by a friend that even having an X1000 Odyssey when playing videos on Youtube, if the cursor remains on the active browser window the video is played jerky.

While instead making the browser window inactive the video is played smoothly.

I apologize again for this report.

I was wondering if this problem really exists on an X1000

And if it can be resolved in the future possibly.

Indeed, thanks once again for the work being done on the new Odyssey.

Thanks one more time.

I just put a small video to highlight what I mean, thanks!

can be selected at 1080p for better viewing
