 Added to that, the latest WebKit no longer relies on Cairo, so we'd be better off doing the same...

They have "WinCairo" route for windows builds, so probabaly that route can be re-used too if there will be needs in..

But for new browser it all probably will be not matter, as for new one there will be needs to build independent few components : webcore & javascriptcore , like libraries, or like classes, and then, anyone can use them as wish in any app (like morphos devs plans to do, and that imho right way)
