Seems that it loads the picture from a stored database or something like that.
Url start with data:image/jpeg;base6 ... and contains more than 16000 characters!

The URL literally has a JPEG image base64 encoded in it. That's what "data:image/jpeg;base64=..." means (where ... is the image data). No wonder it's ridiculously long!

That's a very silly way of submitting an image to a server. Odyssey should still be able to handle it, though.
