There are only two resolutions available for me in YouTube, 360p and 720p while pressing quality gadget. The same video on tablet is available from 144p upwards. How to change it? Its hard to test YT on SAM440 with anything more than 240p ;)

Youtube will only display selections that are compatable with your browser.

Here is a quote directly from YouTube about this:

YouTube videos missing quality options on this browser

YouTube videos are available in many formats and resolutions. However, some browsers do not support newer video formats or quality options. This means these browsers may only have one or two video formats to choose from. We recommend upgrading your browser or operating system for the best viewing experience.

Here is how you can work around it on slower machines. Go to YouTube site and play a video. Adjust the width of your browser window size until the video size shrinks from 640x360 to 426x240. Hopefully this size will play well on your system. You can then use the resize button on the window title bar to toggle between your normal window size and this size when playing YouTube videos.
