

Subject: : Amigans feedback

Topic: : Feature/Change request

Feature/Change request

Author: : Raziel

Date: : 2020/3/22 9:07:48

URL:

@origin

Hi there,

I have a request and am not sure if you can do anything about it, but there's some thing that bothers me a lot with amigans.net since quite some time now.

See here

There is a code piece embedded in [code] in one of the posts, which is too long to fit the size of my browser window (Odyssey here, same with Netsurf, so it's not a browser thing) which renders a horizontal slider at the bottom (and out of sight) of the page.

I can't fully see what is written in some posts and have to scroll down to move the slider and back up again to read the rest, quite annoying.

It's nothing MUI can do about, see here for the rejected ticket.

As written above, Netsurf is doing it as well, so it's got nothing solely to do with Odyssey's (or Netsurf's) html engine (i think?).

Now i wonder if it would be possible to change the site's code to either limit a [code] entry to a fixed size (with a horizontal scrollbar afixed to it) or to make the horizontal scrollbar always visible, just like you did with the amigans.net banner, but on the bottom (maybe just above the "Powered by XOOOPS 2.0... banner)?

Alternatively i could add a bug item at the newly rejuvenated Odyssey github page?