Unfortunately, this is not that easy. The reason is that those texts contain unbreakable lines and this is tackled only on latest CSS, that's why the fixed I did yesterday work on chrome and Firefox. Unfortunately, for Odyssey and especially NetSurf there is no way to break those texts. So, until that CSS is supported, I am afraid I cant do many things with wrapping these texts.

Even worse, I can't even hide them with extra divs around them because the items take their size based on those unbreakable texts, and they do not change with css, making the parent divs pretty wide.

Today did some changes, and one that I hope helps is that I changed the place where the horizontal bar shows up. It should be at the window border now, so available everywhere.

Also, fixed the width of the user info on every post, so they won't cover a lot of space without any reason.

Last thing I changed removed the fixed position from the header as this is not yet implemented in Netsurf and made the header disappear. Now the header is not always at the top of your window, so I am afraid you have to scroll at the top to access it, although we have links in forum to move you at the top automatically.

Hope you find those changes useful and make our website easier to use.
