The real question is not what this can do (since we've known it from about 6 months that "it is coming") but when it will be released.

You've been playing with it from the beginning but we, simple users who will pay for the software, are left over.

For me, with no released date, it's useless speaking of it, sorry.

And since I don't think it will appear before the A1222 is released officially for everyone (in 6 months or more), it's even useless to tease us with cryptic messages.

Emotion used to have a blog (<http://entwickler-x.de/emotion-wip>) on which we can follow the development.

Here, we have nothing except "cryptic messages" of something we all know about and some videos posted on social networks on which we have to guess what is happening.
