I asked the author about it some time ago, and he said it was there to optimize the gadget rendering when the window is resized. What you see is not an extra column but just an empty area. Personally, I find it confusing (because it DOES look like an empty column with no function), so I returned to the trusty old ListBrowser Gadget (also because it supports hierarchical nodes).

This is a bummer. I would stick with the old list browser as well due to the extra "non" column.
