Sorry for being away from this for a few weeks, work has been crazy, I'll be back on this in the next few days. As another route into this, I've also been working on getting a version of Alfkil's SimpleDebug code, since it worked for me, ported from C++ to C as a way of getting another debugger working too. One of the lessons I got from our work on GDB is that it helps me actually understand what is going on codewise more easily doing it that way, rather than tinkering at the edges of existing code not necessarily understanding what is going on. This should help the GDB port too and of course I'll make the github repo public. I also plan to add things like a gui to it too.
