Your point is a nice one. I totally agree with you.
It's fair to ask this question.

As was said here, money went to layers instead of developers and this is what leads to have not enough developments to push the platform forward.

I wonder why companies don't make arrangements like it's done in the PC world instead of fighting.
It would cost less and money could be used for better purposes.

But I guess we cannot do anything about it. We just have to hope, or quit :-/
