And if you think of it, it's actually obvious.

You cannot boot the AmigaOS4.1 CD or install AmigaOS4.1 on any hardware that is not supported by the AmigaOS4.1 CD at the moment.

Having a bootable enhancer USB stick that allows AmigaOS4.1 to be installed with new hardware (New mainboard or just a new SATA controller) is just convenient. Being able to distribute such a solution means that you should not violate the rights of others. So copying over OS4 components on your bootable enhancer stick and distribute it to end customers with your new hardware is a no go.

Hence, the reimplementatation of commands.

The alternative is to let customers cook their own bootable medium from enhancer and the AmigaOS4.1 CD on either windows/Linux or a current AmigaOS4 machine before you can install it on the target hardware.

That's not very user friendly if you ask me.
