Exactly what I thought. I guess anyone would have issues if patches it and tries to sell it.

But we are used to patch our system, aren't we. Before AmigaOS 3.2 our machines were so patched, that you barely knew what is original any more. :D

If there is a released patch out there that could make the app usable again, and the user choose to patch it or not, I don't see the problem with that, to be honest.

But I am not a lawyer.
