My idea was to use System time (at the bottom) when distant time is not filled. But of course, you do as you like.

I don't have to do with how the system time is set. My program requests, using AmigaOS API, the time of the system, and that's what I use. I don't know from where this comes from, or how it is set.

Probably, the time you have there is not the right one, and when you sync it with an NTP server this is fixed. You see, the time window that MediaVault uses is only 3 mins. So if your system time difference is more than that, then the podcasts will not work.
