I use PuTTY Tray at work and it would be nice to be able to use the same session files on the Amiga.

The main differences of the Tray version is 1) the way it minimizes (not concerned), 2) the alternative to save sessions in a file rather than in the Windows registry.

Nice I didn't know about PuttyTray until yet I'll adopt it right now on.

About the minimizing stuff don't put it aside too fast a docky might be used to mimic this and it would then be a feature as useful as it could be under Windows.

What I still haven't found is a WinSCP like client

If you are searching for a graphical SCP client there is none I know of, however Steven Solie ported OpenSSH under AOS4 so there is an scp text client.
