

Subject: : Amigans feedback

Topic: : Wow, the Amigans.net is back!

Re: Wow, the Amigans.net is back!

Author: : BILLE

Date: : 2011/3/26 16:31:08

URL:

Quote:

virgola wrote:

As a web developer I personally do not agree on avoiding javascript or css.

Come on, they were introduced in mid-nineties!

I do not want my Amiga to be stuck in the past, I've choosed to use a Sam460, not an Amiga 1200...

All well and good if it improves the site withrout breaking it. It is unreadbale in IB so I will not be visiting as often as I used to, no fun trying to follow the diabolical layout.

Why make more complex sites with less compaitibilty when the previous site worked so well, that is what I do not understand.

It is certainly not worth the effort of firing up that slow diabolical monstrosity OWB which brings my 1260MHz A1 down to a crawl.

Breaking a site just to be able to use modern gimmicks that are not a neccessity is not progress. It is bad web design to create sites that do not work on all browsers, or to allow alternatives when things like CSS and flas are unavailable.

I will not be buying a ruddy PC to be able browse Amiga sites.