

Subject: : Amigans feedback

Topic: : Wow, the Amigans.net is back!

Re: Wow, the Amigans.net is back!

Author: : broadblues

Date: : 2011/3/27 18:25:07

URL:

@BillE

Quote:

All well and good if it improves the site without breaking it. It is unreadable in IB so I will not be visiting as often as I used to, no fun trying to follow the diabolical layout.

Really? It's perfectly legible in AWeb just a bit "grey", ie background colours and images aren't showing. (I don't expect them too, even though it would be nice).

Quote:

Why make more complex sites with less compatibility when the previous site worked so well, that is what I do not understand.

The previous site was hacked (due to security flaws in the xoops code I presume) any browser failures are the side effect of installing more recent "fixed" code, which wasn't written with non CSS browsers in mind, giving that fact I'd say it's working very well.

Quote:

It is certainly not worth the effort of firing up that slow diabolical monstrosity OWB which brings my 1260MHz A1 down to a crawl.

Really? OWB runs quite fast on all but a few sites which really do overdo the javascript on my SAM 733Mhz,

~~how recent a version are you using? I do sympathise as I use AWeb for browsing sites where I no it works, but I fire up OWB just as often.~~

Anyway I'm posting this with AWeb and it's working fine, so if you want to stick with a 'traditional' Amiga browser there's always that option, if Ibrowse doesn't cut it.

[edit]

fixed typos

[/edit]