If you don't have AmiUpdate set to automatic then this thread might warn that there are updates that might otherwise be missed for weeks. If everybody has it set to automatic... there's still going to be loads of users downloading updates at the same time isn't there?

I don't see why. Even when set to automatic, the user can still set the frequency, so it will still spread the load, unless everyone scans and updates at the same moment in time.
