I don't understand why you get that error message, doesn't really make sense to me: FKey saves all it's configuration information in it's .info (icon) file.

So it should work unless you have done something really wierd like store the FKey executable in one location, but then soft link to another location & have it's .info file there.

You might also check that the "FKey.info" file is not write protected (for some strange reason). The following Shell command should fix that if it is the case:

```
Protect SYS:Utilities/Commodities/FKey.info +RWED

P.S. Assigning it to the Alt-Tab key is kind of genius. All we need now is for SDR to listen to Alt-Tab, so that we can cycle through the screens using the keyboard...
