Its already fixed, but we want to keep it because ppls can use their own old keys (its just cool to see in about it the same as it should be). But by default there will be opensource key of course, and no one will need to worry about (only when want to use their own old keys , to make "about" looks tasty).

That's ridiculous. The first thing the AWeb project did was to dump all restrictions, registrations etc. An 'opensource key' is silly, and will likely cause installation headaches and hassles.
