--disable-debug remove -g yep. And for binaries its enough to do striping, it will remove it too, but as you also want to release libraries for SDK (those lib...a from ffmpeg), then on them strip will not works, and big fat .a files will be in archive, while, with --disable-debug that info will not be inside of lib...a files => small size of them. With binaries striping of course can do the stuff, but just have big .a in SDK make no sense if they contain info no one need in general )

Or with Smutin :) Seriously, i just do boring re-compile work of what Fab do, there nothing cool to be honest. Its even sad, that we do not have any developer on os4 who can do browser from scratch as Fab do :)
