Why, A-Eon or Hyperion, not officially admit when a project is dead ? (netbook or Warp3D on Radeon HD)

Perhaps they haven't admitted that because it isn't true. Maybe they don't say anything because they simply have nothing new to tell right now.

EDIT: No, don't consider this an official statement on its current status. I don't speak for A-EON.

We all know that AmigaOS4 is a hobbyist system, it's a fun one but not very stable, we are all beta-testing it. Therefore, why not release, for example, this pa6t_eth.device driver for every 3000€ x1000 customer since 1 year of beta-testing ?

Trust me, you're not beta-testing it. The PA6T ethernet driver will be released when the actual beta testers and developers have decided that it's stable enough for a public release. Not before.

@all

I see that we are at the "you should give us more news/information" part of the cycle again. This will eventually be followed by "that's announcement/news is rather meaningless, I want to know when something is done." After that will come "why don't you shut up until you have some real news" and "don't say anything until it's almost ready." After that, will come "you should give us more...."

Given the slow pace of development, I'm not sure that this cycle can be avoided. On the bright side, at least we know that people still care. Development continues in the meantime.
