Regarding the multi-user system: I created something like that years ago for OS3, but it didn't actually use security so it was basically a system for handling multiple profiles. the reason for that was the underlying filesystem permissions - there was nothing to prevent anyone starting up with no startup-sequence for example and accessing other people's files for example. Is a multi-user filesystem a part of this project? Or is there some other system that this user system will sit on top of?
